

Television, Popular Memory and the Nation

A one-day symposium supported by the Australian Research Council

University of Wollongong, 7 November 2012

9.45am – 4pm

Building 20, lecture theatre 5

Source: South Coast Times, 'Television Today Supplement', Thursday March 21, 1963.

The Faculty of Arts, University of Wollongong is hosting a one-day symposium investigating the relationship between television, popular memory and nation building. The symposium will be structured around three panels: Television and the nation, Television and the institutions of memory, and What is television? Panelists will not present formal papers but will engage in discussion around key questions with other panelists and with the audience.

Panelists include John Hartley, Graeme Turner, Sue Turnbull, Alan McKee and Chris Healy.

Participation in the audience is free but RSVPs are essential for catering purposes. To RSVP, or for more information, please contact Stephanie Hanson on: shanson@uow.edu.au

This symposium is funded by the ARC Discovery project DP0879596 Australian television and popular memory: new approaches to the cultural history of the media in the project of nation-building.

