PACOP

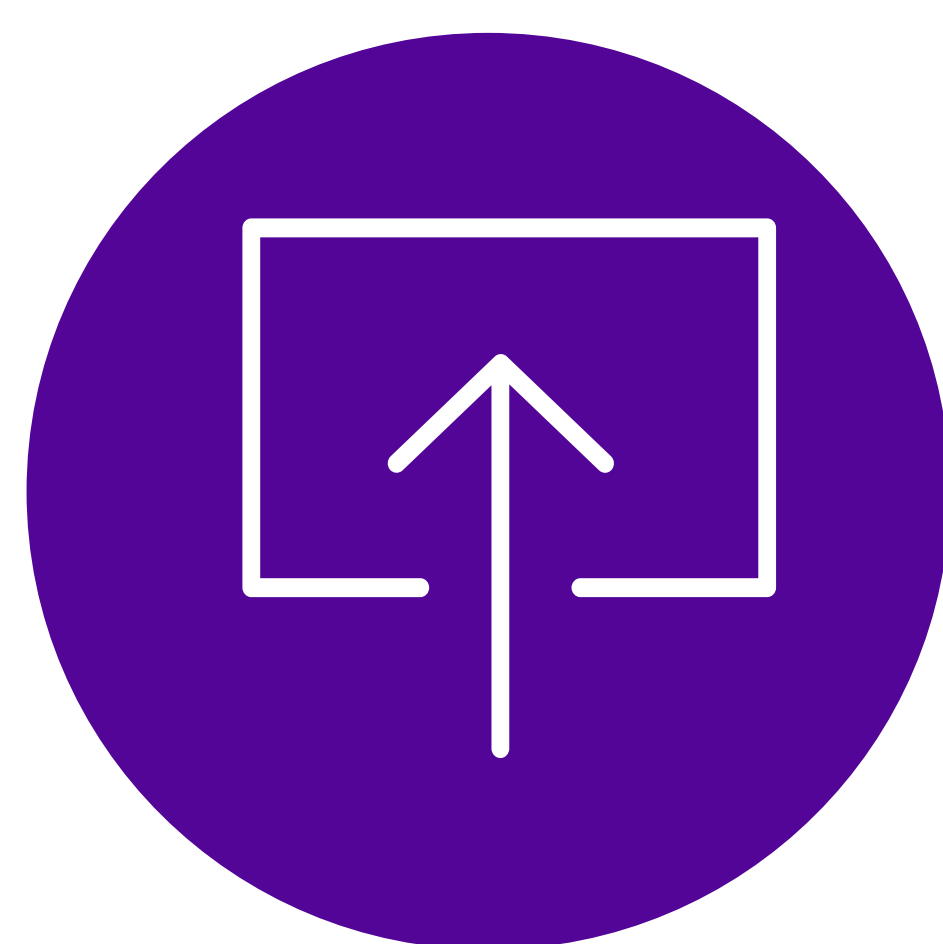

palliative aged care outcomes program

Working to improve resident, family & carer outcomes for palliative aged care

PACOP is a national palliative aged care program funded by the Australian Government Department of Health.

So how does PACOP work for residents & aged care homes (ACHs)?

ACHs send information about palliative aged care outcomes to PACOP (this does not include any identifying information about residents)

PACOP analyses the information to identify opportunities for ACHs to improve the care they provide

PACOP provides reports & education to ACHs to help them continuously improve the quality of palliative care they provide to residents

PACOP, ACHs, their organisations & researchers use the data to improve palliative care for all residents in all ACHs
